

Castello Da Vinci is a labor of love for General Braxton and a major source of his enjoyment following his retirement from the U.S. Army and his recent decision to transition from the CEO position at Defense Therapeutics to assume the ceremonial post of Chairman Emeritus of that company.

Due to the many requests for wine that have exceeded Castello Da Vinci's limited estate supplies, General Braxton has arranged for one of the world's finest family wineries, Cline Cellars, to create and bottle a very special release of Xantaeus for the general public. This exclusive vintage will be available in November 2005. A portion of the proceeds from every bottle sold will be donated to the Mississippi Center for Justice.

General Braxton Featured in New Book

General Clark Braxton is featured as a major character in a new thriller by author Lewis Perdue. The book, called Perfect Killer, is a partly true, partly fictionalized account of a very serious issue that will face the military in the coming years. General Braxton's former colleague, Dr. Richard Gabriel (Col. USA, Ret.) offers a very chilling account of this problem in a non-fiction Afterword to Perfect Killer.

Author Perdue has taken many liberties with General Braxton to make an important point. Despite these liberties, General Braxton fully supports the book, even to the extent of sending bottles of Xantaeus to key people he believes will help raise the book's serious issues.
